Project details:

- This bespoke pattern is an original and new design by the Brintons team and is woven in the Brintons signature 80/20 blend of 80% wool 20% nylon. The contemporary style carpet uses grey and blue tones with fleeting accents of colour. Floating panels have been incorporated as a unique, modern feature, with patterns designed to reflect the ornate wall light fittings.
- The hotel dates back to the Tudor period and has 62 en-suite bedrooms. Brintons collaborated with Abi Perry Jones at Jones architecture+design to carefully construct a pattern fit for the reception area of the hotel, to add immediate impact as guests arrive at the property.
- Location: the expanded 16th century farmhouse is situated in the heart of Shakespeare Country in the village of Kings Coughton, which makes it the ideal base for visiting the most popular Midlands attractions with easy proximity to Stratford-upon-Avon, Birmingham and the NEC.

Comments from the team:

- Craig Siwicki says “It was a pleasure to design this bespoke carpet for such a central public area of the King’s Court Hotel. It was imperative that our expertise was reflected in both the quality and the design of the carpet, especially since the client had already had such a positive experience with Brintons”
- “We approached Brintons specifically for this project as we knew that they had the creative expertise to realise our concept design. From experience, Brintons make the process really easy from design to installation. The resulting carpet is now installed and has exceeded our expectations - it is a timeless pattern with a bright and fresh, contemporary colouring. The carpet is a fundamental part of our design scheme and sets the scene for really great hotel experience” Abi Perry-Jones, Creative Director of Jones architecture+design
- “A reception area sustains a lot of footfall, so it was important for us to have a carpet that would continually last. Our previous carpet had also been a Brintons design and had sustained over 20 years of use, so when Abi approached Brintons we were confident that the end result would look marvellous, and continue to impress us for years to come” Georgie McGrath, Owner of the King’s Court Hotel
